About the e-STP

Short Term Program (STP) on Mixed Method Research in Social Sciences and public policy-1 aims to develop well formulated research questions where participants will learn research designs and methods best suited to answer the research question, beyond the usual social Science and public policy disciplines. We encourage the use of interdisciplinary strategies evolved from other disciplines and aim to introduce mixed-methods designs to the researchers/students of public policy and systems research that are coherent from the research question through choice of design and methods of analysis. This STP will also focus on the essentials of project management, uniquely integrating ethics in research process and make endeavor to weave in concepts related to thinking of social science and public policy as a system and of equity.

Objective of e-STP

The objective of this e-STP is to introduce mixed method research from the lenses of multidisciplinary approaches in Social Sciences and public policy to enable the budding researchers/students/industry to have a clear understanding on the foundations of research approaching from the problem to the solution by using various tools and techniques. It covers following Modules:

- Module 1: Framing the research question
- Module 2: From research question to re-search design
- Module 3: Data collection methods and Analysis plan-1
- Module 4: Data collection methods and Analysis plan-2
- Module 5: Plagiarism check, Writing proposal and submission to donors
